

LIBRARY STUDIES (LIBR)

LIBR 1101 Introduction to Library Research 1 Credit

Department: College of Arts and Sciences

Acquaints students with the process of acquiring, evaluating, and assimilating information from available resources. Focuses on information literacy skills and the understanding that those skills are a tool for life long learning.

Grade Mode(s): Standard Letter, Registrar do not use FN, Registrar do not use FS

LIBR 1301 Fundamentals of Information Literacy 3 Credits

Department: College of Arts and Sciences

With the expansive volume of information available at one's fingertips, information literacy is an essential skill in our academic, professional, and personal lives. This cross-disciplinary course will explore information in a variety of contexts: from "fake news" to Facebook and from Google to Gutenberg. Topics covered will include: the process of information creation and consumption; strategic information seeking behaviors; critically evaluating information; the ethical use of information. issues pertaining to the protection of our own personal information.

Grade Mode(s): Standard Letter, Registrar do not use FN, Registrar do not use FS